This is explaining the different types of conflict used by the main character in this novel in dealing with conflicts in his life as internal conflict and external conflict. The data used in writing this novel is a written novel Stephanie Mayer's title is "Twilight Saga: New Moon". The theory used in writing scientific papers is taken from the theory of Edward Robert Sternberg's Triangular Love.

Bella Swan is portrayed as the main character. Conflict that is Bella experiences basically comes from within herself, where she is dating a vampire named Edward and wants to marry Edward and become part of the Vampire family. In this novel we can also find that Bella and Edward also have external conflicts with Victoria, Jasper and Jacob. There are three components of love Triangular Love proposed by Robert J Stenberg's theory of intimacy, passion, and commitment. The three components of love are found in the relationship between Bella and Edward. And Bella's love for Jacob is romantic love because they have a passion for intimacy and there is no commitment because Bella thinks Jacob is only a friend.
